Course Description: Study of the work of writers of Caribbean origin in the United States and Great Britain, with special attention to their explorations of migration, colonial and post-colonial histories, race, and ethnic identity, and to their reception by readers and critics.

Class Dynamics: Classes will be based on dialogue, open discussion and specific student questions. Lectures will be provided occasionally to guide and inform discussion of particular concepts or texts but will not substitute for student participation. Therefore students are responsible for coming to class prepared, having read and/or viewed assigned materials, and ready to comment on them.

Students are responsible for bringing to my attention any problems they may encounter during the semester. This includes issues of comprehension, individual assignments or other concerns that may affect student performance.

Required Work:

There are three types of written work required for class.

1. A series of brief responses (150 words each) to the readings that appear in RED on the syllabus. Look below for dates due. The responses are due by 5pm of the evening before class and should be posted on our Blackboard site. You are welcome to respond to any postings and are responsible for reading all your classmates’ postings by class time.
2. A midterm paper (2000 words minimum) focused on a critical engagement with two of the essays discussed in class.

3. A 4000-word research paper on a topic chosen in consultation with the instructor.

If, in the course of writing any of the required work you should make use of the ideas or wording of a consulted source, you must provide documentation to that effect following the guidelines established in the MLA Handbook or Chicago Manual of Style. If you are unclear as to what requires documentation, consult the Manual, the pamphlet on Originality and Attribution: A Guide for Student Writers at Vassar College, or myself. Failure to acknowledge sources constitutes a breach of academic integrity and will be referred to the College’s Academic Panel. This applies equally to material taken from the worldwide web.

Attendance Policy

Attendance to class meetings is obligatory. Absence from class will not constitute a valid excuse for lack of preparedness or late work. Students can keep abreast of course assignments through Blackboard or though contact with fellow students or the instructor. After the first unexcused absence from class, subsequent absences will result in a corresponding reduction of the final grade (see below).

Students with Disabilities

Academic accommodations are available for students with disabilities who are registered with the Office of Disability and Support Services. Please schedule an appointment with the instructor early in the semester to discuss any accommodations for this course which have been approved by the Director of Disability and Support Services as indicated in your DSS accommodation letter.
